BUSINESS STANDARDS ALL INDIA EDITION - MUMBAI DATE - 16/02/26

'My focus for Mafatal is to take uniforms to the world'

Q&A Priyavrat Mafatal, vice-chairman of the Arvind Mafatal group and managing director of Mafatal Industries, spoke to Akshara Srivastava and Nivedita Mookerjee about reimagining the 121-year-old brand, coping with geopolitical disruptions, family-owned versus professionally-run businesses, and more. Edited excerpts from an exclusive interview with the 38-year-old Mafatal, a fifth-generation industrialist, when he visited New Delhi recently.

The Mafatal group has been in the uniform space for long. Why have you decided to move online at this point?
 ■ Yes, we have been in the school ecosystem for a very long time, having made clothes for one in nine school-going Indian kids. But branding was not important at the time; things have changed now as the country becomes more aspirational. We've noticed that people want to know the label behind the uniform. The tailoring industry is also becoming smaller and the shift towards garments is being expedited with the advent of e-commerce. So, we've added that layer in the form of a marketplace for corporate houses and schools. We are also expanding that to hospitals with the launch of Mafatal MedTiss (apparel for health-care professionals)... We will have pockets that will be online and allow us to be proactive rather than reactive.

«WE ARE A PROFESSIONALLY RUN FAMILY-OWNED BUSINESS... AND A 121-YEAR-OLD STARTUP»
 Priyavrat Mafatal
 VC, Arvind Mafatal Group, & MD, Mafatal Industries

The House of Mafatal in the last 120 years has witnessed many ups and downs. What does the House signify now and what is the kind of generational shift that you are steering?
 ■ Internally, I think, it signifies immense resilience and the ability to bounce back from everything that is thrown at us—from the first World War to Covid-19—that is the DNA of the organisation. The worst phase for us was in the 90s when we were a formally sick company in the BIFR (Board for Industrial and Financial Reconstruction) and we didn't know if we would exist or not. So, it is our responsibility towards the organisation that we put ourselves back there and tell people a story, which they may be inspired by.

You have recently forayed into exports too. How did that come about?
 ■ When we were rebuilding, we wanted to rebuild on the back of a stable market that was India... In the last decade or 15 years, we've managed to build a predictable growth for ourselves. On the back of a government change that was talking about rebuilding, it made sense for us to build with them—for a market we understood. And now, we feel we want to expand what we're strong in and take that to the world.

In the light of the recent trade deals with the European Union (EU) and the United States (US), how do you see your exports segment evolving?
 ■ We started out with Western Asia, which is culturally similar to India. We've done a lot of business with Sri Lanka and Bangladesh... Now with the trade pact with the EU and some certainty on the US for those markets. The EU will play a big part of our way forward because the deal makes us competitive. If not more, as Bangladesh and Sri Lanka. There has been uncertainty—political or economic—with nations like Pakistan, Sri Lanka, and Bangladesh. So, who's the next best bet other than China? It's India.

My personal focus for Mafatal is to take uniforms to the world... It has also become very exciting to look at the non-uniform space and that's something we're pushing for in some geographies.

Geopolitics and Artificial Intelligence (AI) continue to be two big disruptors for businesses. How are you addressing these?
 ■ Our rubber chemical manufacturing unit, Noel, which is dependent on global trade, sees the impact of geopolitical disruptions. In textiles, we have a strong footing and are not a house of cards. Since we came out of BIFR, the world had changed and we were playing catch-up. We started to feel confident only in the last five years and are sure that we've built a stable footing at a group level that will allow us to leapfrog. Coming to AI, the speed of disruption is limited to these two spaces. But we also have Get Set Learn, our future skill building programmes, where we are using a lot of AI.

Insufficient labour force has been a concern in some of the textile hubs in India. Will automation address that gap?
 ■ Yes and No. There has been automation with the talk of smart factories etc., but the scale is missing. Automation or robotics may not replace humans. But new machinery, which is a lot more competitive, is starting to replace older machinery. So, the workforce required on a machine is going down. But, we are still a while away from seeing a completely automated factory. Consider the edtech space, for instance. Online education has not been able to replace offline education. But educators who embrace technology will replace those who don't. That is the blend of human and technology we will see.

Surveys have shown that the younger generation is not keen on carrying on with family business. What are your thoughts on family-run versus professionally-run business?
 ■ You need families to think and operate professionally to remain competitive and you need professionals to be an entrepreneur and empathetic as a family member would. One is not superior to the other... So, we are a professionally run family-owned business. Similarly, I have a 100-year company and a one-year-old company in the group. The new company is taught the importance of governance, business dealing and keeping the kitchen clean, while the legacy companies are taught how to be nimble when it comes to decision making. We are a 121-year-old start-up.

Mafatal was counted as one of the top brands in India at one point. Is that something you aspire to achieve again?
 ■ I don't live in the past. I learn from the past. There are aspects from the past that I hold on to dearly, because that is our DNA and value system. But the world has changed... I don't want to do things in comparison with the past. I want to do it in comparison to what we're building today.

Any concrete goal?
 ■ We want to be the most-loved and trusted company in the education space that gives you everything from uniforms to AI. There will be other things, but that's the immediate goal for the next three to five years. We have been around for more than 100 years and if we do this right, we'll be around for another 200.

Nisus Finance to set up land fund, SM Reit

Prachi Pisal
 Mumbai, 15 February

Alternative investment firm Nisus Finance is planning to set up a ₹2,000 crore land fund this year, with an initial corpus of ₹1,000 crore, followed by another ₹1,000 crore next year. The company is also preparing to launch a small and medium real estate investment trust (SM Reit) platform worth ₹2,000 crore, a top executive said.

While accelerating the land fund and SM Reit plans, Nisus is aiming to double its assets under management, which stood at around ₹1,900 crore as of the first half of the fiscal year 2026 (H1 FY26) between Dubai and India, by year-end.

"As far as India is concerned, the strategy continues to be the last-mile financing or credit space and bridge financing or credit for development projects," said Amit Goenka, founder, Chairperson, and managing director of Nisus Finance, in an interaction with Business Standard.

Apollo redraws medical tourism map as Bangladesh share dips

SHINE JACOB
 Chennai, 15 February

Apollo Hospitals Enterprise Limited (AHEL) has said that it is already feeling the impact from the Bangladesh crisis in its overseas patient inflow, owing to diversification to new regions. After two years of disruption in patients coming from the neighbouring country, the hospital chain's international patient revenue rose 28 per cent year-on-year (Y-o-Y) during the third quarter of FY26 (Q3FY26).

Share of patients from other regions, including Africa, West Asia, and South East Asia, increased during the period while Bangladesh dipped. According to company data, this diversification led to patient inflows from the country dipping 70.4 per cent during Q3FY26, from 20 per cent in early 2024.

"I don't see any incremental or negative impact of Bangladesh from here on... There has been a clear focus in IPS beyond Bangladesh, and that has come from various markets," said Krishnan Akhileswaran, group chief financial officer (CFO) at Apollo Hospitals.

Expanding horizon

- Apollo's international patient revenue rose 28% Y-o-Y in Q3FY26, despite disruptions in Bangladesh inflows over the past two years
- Bangladesh's share of overseas patients fell to 7.8% in Q3FY26, from 30% in early 2024, as Africa, West Asia and South East Asia gained traction
- International patients constituted around 6% (₹190 crore) of the total revenue of ₹3,183 crore in Q3FY26

Apollo 24/7 to break even in Q1FY27
 The company said that Apollo 24/7 is on track to break even by the first quarter of FY27. AHEL has already planned a restructuring process to unlock the value of its omni-channel pharmacy and digital businesses, and to enhance shareholder returns.

In June 2025, the Chennai-based hospital chain had announced plans to spin off its digital health and pharmacy distribution businesses into a separate entity, drawing up plans to list the new entity within 18 to 21 months.

As part of the restructuring, the company's omni-channel pharmacy and digital health business, Apollo HealthCo, will be first demerged from AHEL into a new entity, following which, its plasma distribution arm, Keimed, will be merged into the new company.

"On a consolidated basis, Apollo HealthCo is expected to be around ₹20,000 crore this year. Next year, by Q4 we should be at a run rate of ₹25,000 crore with a 7 per cent Ebitda margin. By the end of this year, we should be demerging that and listing it also," Akhileswaran said.

The Competition Commission of India has already given its clearance in September. The company said it is also expecting a no-objection certificate from the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI).

"The process is already on, we have already got the stock exchange approval. Other clearances will take another six to eight months, and once that is out, we should be able to get shareholder approval. By Q4 FY27, we should be able to list it, or even before it," he said.

The entire process of restructuring is expected to be over by the listing of the new company. The new entity will include the digital health platform Apollo 24/7, the off-line pharmacy business of Apollo HealthCo, Keimed, and the telehealth services business.
